Herman Easom, MD Distinguished Lecture
Dr. Herman Easom devoted most of his professional and personal life to the prevention of lung disease, particularly tuberculosis, silicosis and asbestosis. Through his quiet efforts, lasting more than seven decades, the quality of life improved for many North Carolinians. This named lecture acknowledges his contributions and assures their remembrance – a legacy for the future. His career was legendary in North Carolina public health. He served as Director of the state Occupational Health Department from 1935 to 1944, working here from its inception in the 1930s through the program’s end in 2000. Dr. Easom served as Chest Consultant and Chair of the Advisory Medical Committee for the Dusty Trades Program, Occupational Surveillance Unit. He was the Clinic Physician and Medical Director of the N.C. Sanatorium in Eastern N.C. from 1942 to 1975, and served as a volunteer and held the office of President of the American Lung Association of N.C., Tar River Region and the State Board, volunteering from 1948 to 1986. Until the age of 100, he read x-rays for the TB Control Program twice a month for more than 60 years. Born on October 4, 1902, he was the longest serving public health employee in North Carolina, passing away on December 16, 2005, in Wilson County at the age of 103.
