■ New Forms of Smokeless, Spitless Tobacco Put Users and Children at Risk

Tobacco companies are test marketing and debuting new "dissolvable tobacco." These products are being promoted as an answer for smokers who are unable to smoke due to smoking restrictions in the workplace, at home and in social situations. Dissolvable tobacco may also be regarded as a way to smoke around children without lighting up or spitting as with other Dissolvable tobacco is made from sweetened tobacco, area cigarettes with areas great binders. It is designed to be placed in the mouth, on the tongue or between the cheek and gum where it dissolves to release tobacco. The appeal of dissolvable tobacco is further enhanced by the addition of flavors such as wintergreen, mint and "java".

While these products are sold in child-resistant packaging, their resemblance to candy and breath mint strips and the likelihood that adults will carry the small packages in their pockets or leave them in other unsecured places, means that children may have easy access to them.

Dissolvable tobacco products contain between 60 to 100% of the nicotine found in one cigarette. Smokers who use these products may get a higher dose of nicotine than they are used to, possibly resulting in adverse reactions such as tremors, nausea, vomiting, and agitation. Children who ingest this dose of nicotine typically become pale, shaky, sweaty and vomit. Access to pleasant tasting, easy to eat dissolvable tobacco, however, might encourage children to

R.J. Reynolds scales back marketing of dissolvable tobacco products

Winston-Salem Journal

By Richard Craver

July 31, 2013

After spending more than 4 1/2 years in five test markets, including Charlotte, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has struggled to gain consumer traction for its trio of dissolvable tobacco products. It has struggled to the extent that it is limiting future marketing of the products: a pellet (Camel Orbs), a twisted stick the size of a toothpick (Camel Sticks) and a film strip for the tongue (Camel Strips). The goal has been making its tobacco products more accessible within a society that's clamping down on smoking. Reynolds began testing the dissolvable products in early 2009. "At this time there are no plans for any marketing beyond these channels," Smith said.

"We've found in our conversations with adult tobacco consumers that while there's strong interest in the category, a different product form may present a better option over the long term."

World No Tobacco Day
Kansas Test Market for New Tobacco Product

Tuesday – Tuesday, May 31 is World No Tobacco Day, a day to consider the dangers of tobacco products and an opportunity to share with Kansas that the tobacco industry has introduced a new product that comes with some of the same health risks as other tobacco products. The Kansas Department of Health and Environment (KDHE) wants Kansans to know that the state is currently a test market for tobacco sticks and the potential dangers of this new product.

The tobacco sticks, sold under the popular brands Marlboro and Skoal, are sold in matchbook-size packages and look like chocolate-covered toothpicks. According to one tester, the products not only look like candy, they also taste like candy. The tobacco sticks have been seen at convenience stores across the state, Kansas is one of only three states where tobacco sticks are currently being test marketed.

The state's health agency, KDHE, is particularly concerned about the potential appeal of these new tobacco sticks to youth. "KDHE Secretary Dr. Robert Moser said, "The packages are so small that they could easily be concealed in a shirt or pants pocket and youth could use tobacco sticks in front of parents or teachers while appearing to have a simple toothpick in their mouth. We are also concerned about the risk of young children accidentally ingesting these products."

The possibility that adults will carry the small packages in their pockets or leave them in other unsecured places means that young children may have easy access to tobacco sticks. As with any tobacco product, there is a risk that a young child may ingest a lethal amount of nicotine. The estimated nicotine content per stick is 1 mg of nicotine per 5.2 ounces of body weight. Ingestion of as little as 1 mg of nicotine by a small child can produce symptoms such as nausea and vomiting. While nicotine content of Marlboro and Skoal tobacco sticks has not been tested, a study in Pediatrics found that a similar product Camel Sticks had 3.1 mg of nicotine per stick.

We protect lives, injuries and foster a safe and sustainable environment for the people of Kansas.

United States (moist snuff and snus) – “General”

Swedish Match is the third biggest producer of moist snuff in the US with 10% of the market share in January 2012, compared with market leader Altria (56.6%) and RJ Reynolds which holds 32.2%.

Sales of Swedish snus in the US is relatively insignificant, Swedish Match is reportedly increasing its marketing effort to grow these sales, with General snus available in 3,500 stores across the US in 2011.

KEEPING SMOKERS SMOKING

New smokeless, spit-less products

Philip Morris USA's Marlboro Snus

Redesigned Pack in early 2009 to fit “perfectly alongside your smokes” – to prevent smokers from quitting.

Altria's Newest Smokeless Product: VERVE

Announced in May 2012 and will be test-marketed in select Sheetz stores in Virginia.

VERVE discs are a new kind of tobacco product designed to appeal to adult smokers interested in innovative types of spit-free tobacco product alternatives to cigarettes.

Verve disc, which has some similarities with cough pill releases nicotine within about 15 minutes as a user chews it. Such a disc of cellulose fibers and a polymer do not dissolve, so user will have to throw it away. The new product will be sold in a packaging of 16 discs, each possessing approximately 1.5 milligrams of nicotine, which is less than majority smokeless products possess.

Altria plans to start selling Verve brand in more than 50 stores in Virginia by June, the report stated, but it has not decided whether to spread the product nationally. This novelty will be available for nearly $3 in stores in Virginia, and sold only to adult smokers. The tobacco giant is sure that such an approach will allow it to advertise the product with lower health warnings than those related to cigarettes.

RAI's new test products, only in North Carolina as of late 2012

"[Verve] was really designed for those adult smokers who are interested in smoke-free alternatives" to cigarettes, said David Sylvia, a spokesman for Henrico County-based Altria. "Our research shows that about 30 percent of adult smokers are interested in some sort of smokeless product."

However, many of those smokers are uncomfortable with traditional, loose-leaf chewing tobacco or snuff, so Altria and other companies are designing products aimed at wider acceptance.

"We are all aware of the clampdown on cigarette use and the decline (in consumption) that is going on in the country," said Jack Russo, a consumer staples analyst for Edward Jones & Co.

33

Tju® chewing tobacco gum is a tobacco product alternative for adult cigarette smokers. It is sold in Denmark and is not permitted to be sold to persons under the age of 18.

Packaging contains the required warning in Danish: "This tobacco product can damage your health and is addictive."

Label states "Not for children" in Danish and packaging is designed to make it difficult for children to open.

Manufactured in Vejle, Denmark by Okono A/S, an affiliate of Fertin Pharma A/S.

Messages – Attack Smoke-Free

shaun says: June 21, 2013 at 11:55 am Big tobacco should stay out of the e CIG market. People switch to e cigs for the health benefits and because they are tired of paying high CIG prives. I can go to my local e cig store and get a great vapor king kit for $50 and I only pay $7 a week to refill my device. If big tobacco gets involved its going to cause the prices to go up and eventually it will be just as expensive if not more than cigs. I think big tobacco wants the price of e cigs to go up so people go back to smoking. - See more at: <http://vaperanks.com/r-j-reynolds-tobacco-company-launches-vuse-electronic-cigarette/#sthash.uiSqUaTa.dpuf>

VUSE is not what they market to be

I live in CO & I was excited to try this. Costs only 11 dollars & refill cartridges are 6 dollars for two & it comes with a charger. The smoke you get from it is great, i loved the idea that it was rechargeable, but one BIG problem, after 3 days my VUSE cig stopped working. No lights, no smoke, nothing. I thought it was a fluke so i bought two more...& within 3 days the cig stopped working! & this last one i think there is something really wrong, maybe even dangerous...it is releasing some type of toxic smell from the base of it (where u inhale) & i know its not the cartridge, its coming from the actual e cig. I am pissed! I plan to write the company, & demand my money back. I loved it tho...which is why im pissed. Ddefinitely will not last you more than 3 days. Such a shame that such a good product doesnt live up to its promise to be rechargeable!

Price Differences

HOW INDUSTRY ACHIEVES THE GOAL

Why Keep Prices Lower?

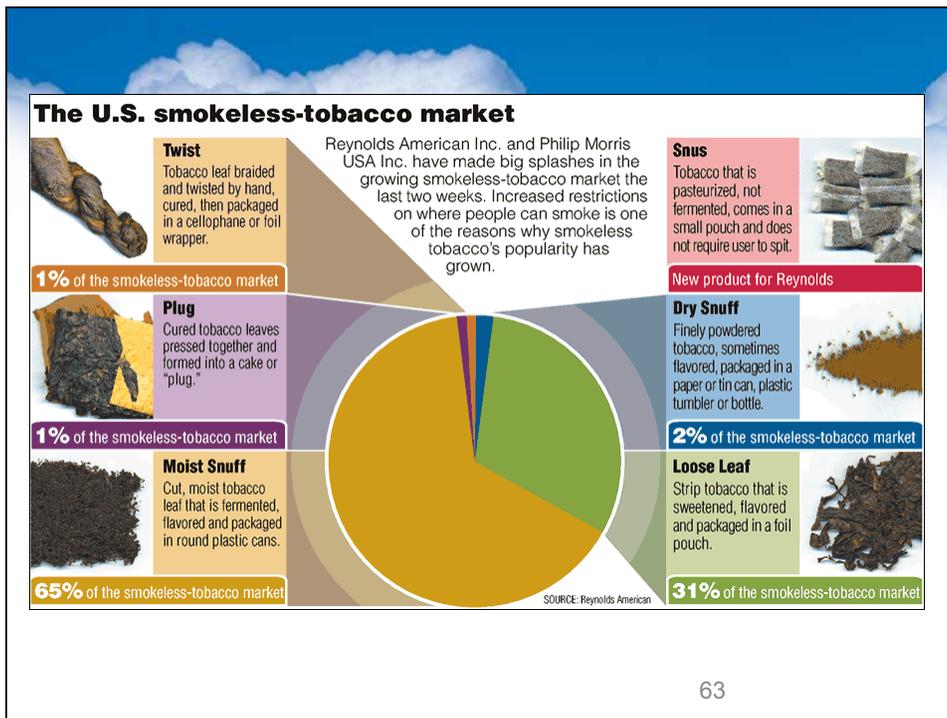

- Lower prices are more accessible, affordable, and appealing to youth
 - Draws them in to a lifetime of addiction
 - Can lead to smoking, the big money-maker for the tobacco industry
- Promotes dual use and hinders quit attempts
 - Smokers can buy fewer cigarettes by using other products sometimes
 - Why quit because cigarettes are more expensive when you can temporarily substitute with OTPs?

What Can States & Localities Do?

The FDA Law Doesn't Change Each State's Right To...

- Implement & enforce smoke-free laws
- Fully fund tobacco control programs
- Provide coverage for cessation services
- Increase tobacco taxes
- Take action to restrict the sale & distribution of tobacco
- Licensing restrictions

 AMERICAN LUNG ASSOCIATION.
Fighting for Air

Summary

- The tobacco industry has changed – and so have its tactics
- Many new products are being introduced
- The FDA law has made a big difference in how tobacco companies market to youth – but we need to be vigilant and keep them from trying to get around the law
- States can do a lot of things on their own
